The Daily Standard.

Saturday, August 6, 1870. Yale Convention Constitution.

Now, that the public mind is interested in speculating as to the probable terms of the new constitution, we deem it not inappropriate to publish the sixth resolution of the Yale Convention, which was held in September, 1868. It is as fol-

That, whether admitted into the Dominion or not, the Legisleture should consist of a Governor and one Chamber called the Legisla-tive Assembly; that the members of the Assembly should be elected for a period of not more than four years; that the sessions should be he'd annually; that members be not exceeding forty days in each session. That the qualifications for members be as follows: -Being a male British subject of full age, and possessing real or personal proper-ty, or both, of the value of $500. That the qualification of electors be as follows :- 1. A male British subject, or alien who has taken the oath of allegiance. 2. Residence in the Colony one year, and in the District in which the vote is cast, three months. 3. Possessed of real or personal property. or both, at to be welcomed to a political equalof the District. 5. That any male alien, who can read and write or speak the English language, and who has been five years in the Colony, and is possessed of real estate to the value of $100, and appears on the electoral roll, shall be entitled to vote.

Now, without setting up the contents of this resolution as in every way the exact thing that is required in the new con stitution, it will at least serve as a foundation for the consideration of the subject. There never has been, neither is there any difference of opinion in this Colony as to the Legislature required. It is everywhere held that the Governor and one Chamber . ug it to constitute the Legislature. It is also the universal opinion that one Chamber, whether called a Legislative Council or a Legislative Assembly, onght to be elective. No advocate outside of Government circles is ever heard who favos the notion of nominees Even among officials some are bold enough to repudiate a nominative Council. One Chamber, wholly elective, is the real wish of the people, so far as it can be gather-ed. In this respect, the popular judgment is right. The idea of having a conncil of which six out of fifteen shall be nominated is thoroughly objectionable to the genius of our people. At best, the Government of the Colony is but a municipality at present, and when we enter the Dominion it will be more so : for then we shall have relinquished certain important rights that we now exercise as an independent Colony. Such being the case no good reason can be urged why the Legislative Assembly should not be wholly elective, the same as the Councils' of Victoria and New Westminister. The number of members constituting the Chamber is not suggested in the Yale Resolution. But the very smallest num- HIPPODROME & CIRCUS. ber ought to be twenty-four. Less than that would militate against working out Responsible Government. Fifteen members, of whom six are to be nominated. is a prepostrous number if party Government be introduced. Two or three obstinate and self-willed persons from some whim or caprice might turnout a Minisof such two or three in such two or three in a a chamber of fifteen would be equivalent to forty or eighty members in the House of Commons of England or twenty in the House of Commons of Canada. With twenty-four to forty members, it will be difficult enough to work Responsible Government; but with fifteen it will be next to impossible. The term of four years will be short enough for the contin-uance of the Chamber by limitation. A shorter period would operate as a hindrance to Responsible Government; for it would be difficult to get men to take office if the Legislature would expire by act of limitation in one, two or three years. So far as annual sessions are concerned, they are a necessity. The Taxpayers will have an opportunity to review the acts of their servants once a year at least Besides that, b ennial or tri-ennial sessions are impossible in the present condition of the country. Hereafter, when laws shall have been enacted that will reach the different interests of the country generally, the expenses of annual sessions might be avoided; but it is not very likely that our people will very soon be as practical on this point as some of our American neighbors. As regards the qualification of members, the English principle is to have no property qualification, whatever. The possession of the sum of $500, in real or persona property, as mentioned in the Yale Resolution, is not much The correct principle, however, is that which obtains in England and the United States-no property qualification for members. Let the electors select the man whom they deem best qualified by ability to serve their interests. With respect to the qualification of electors, the true principles are moral worth and political knowledge, with a fixed term of residence, and registered on the electoral roll. If these requisites be established. a property qualification is unneces-sary. But in the diversity of opinion if the property qual-fication in the Yale Resolution were adopted, it would not operate very injuriou ly. Nearly every miner, every farmer, everybody has $100 in real or personal property. It may be use'ess to object to a property qualification, for there are men who measure every man's weight, morally and politi-cally, by his wealth. We are not of that number. We hold that if a man can read and write, is well-behaved, has been a resident a year in the country, and has had his name registered on the Electoral Roll, he ought to be entitled 'o vote. It may, however, be necessary o make concessions to those who do not enter ain lefty opinions of humanity. The clause in the Yale Convention resolution respecting aliens is to say the east a liberal one. There are those who may not deem it judicious; and such persons may be thoroughly conscientions, for such is the general custom of nations We, however, do not hesitate to express the opinion that in fraiming a new tonstitution we ought to deal in the most liberal spirit with our adopted citizens. The common interest, the common prosperity is concerned in endeavoring to break down the political barrier between our cit zens who are native-born, and those who belong to friendly nationalities paid their reasonable expenses for a period In the United States on the admission of a new State or Territory, the most 1 peral provisions are made for naturalization of foreigners residence only, being sufficent. We see no good rerson why some such liberal usage might not be adopted here. All that we ask is fidelity to our country in peace or war; that granted any one of any nationality ought ity. Whatever provision will effect of $100. 4. Registered on the electoral roll that end will promote our national
